Daan Zandbelt (1975) is an architect, urbanist and partner at De Zwarte Hond, an office for architecture and urbanism based in Rotterdam, Groningen and Cologne. From the Rotterdam office, he works with his team on complex urban projects that vary from regional strategies to precise architecture interventions. In 2015 - 2016 Daan led the IABR–Atelier Rotterdam, the Productive City. This atelier explored, through research by design, how the Rotterdam region can develop a makers’ economy, with a team formed by L’AUC from Paris, marco.broekman from Amsterdam and De Zwarte Hond. This atelier brought two of his competences together: ‘research by design’ and spatial economic strategies.

Besides De Zwarte Hond, he works as assistant professor at the Van Eesteren chair of metropolitan design of the TU Delft. The same university where he graduated, with honorable mention as an architect (MSc) and urbanist (MSc). In Chicago he studied at UIC.
